A Mr. Rosseau, of Rouen, had married a lady of fourteen, whom he left in perfect health after starting on a short jour-ney. After a few days, he heard that unless be returned immediately be would find his wife baried. On reaching home, he saw the faneral ready. In an agony of grief he had the codin removed to his room and unscrewd. He placed the body on the bed and ordered twenty-five incisio to be made on it. At the twenty-sixth, probably deeper than the others, the dereased exclaimed. "How severely you burt me!" Medical assistance was immediately given. The lady had afterward seventeen children.

In the sitting of the Royal Acadamy of Modicine in France, 1827, a paper was read by Chauncey Chantouruelic on the danger of busty inhumations. This led to a discussion in which Mr. Desgenelle suid that he had heard from Mr. Thourot, who had superintended the human remains of the cemetery and the charnel-house Des Innocens, that many skeletons were found in positions showing that the individuals had so much struck with the revelation that he caused a clause to be inserted in his will respecting his own interment. At Toulouse, France, a lady having been burried in the church of the Capuchin Friars with a diamond ring on her finger. a servant entered the vanit to steal the ring; and, as the finger was swelled and the ring would not come off, he began cutting the finger. On hearing a load shriek from the deceased, the thief fell senseless. At the time of morning prayers, the monks having heard some grouns, found the lady alive and the servant dead. Thus death had his prey; there was but a change of victims.

The wife of Mr. Duhamel, a celebrated lawyer of Lyons, France, having been supposed dead 24 hours, the body was placed on a table for the purpose of preparing it for burial. Her hisband strongly opposed it, not believing her dead. To ascertain it, knowing she was very fond of the cymbal. and the tones which symbal-players sing, he called one. On hearing the instrument and the voice, the deceased recovered motion and speech. She survived her apparent death forty years.

At the close of the last century a woman in Paris was thought to be dead, and the body was put on some straw with a taper at the feet. Some young men who sat up with the corpse in a froic, over-turned the taper. This set the straw on fire. The deceased, whose body the flames

On a piece of ground below Coleridge, buildings have been erected by the Highgate Improvement Company for mechanics. Gentlemen complain, but I think the company deserves all honor for this attempt to provide country apartments for London people who most need country air. Let me add that Mr. Vincy, the Congregational minister, had peviously done the same thing, but on a smaller scale. But time and tide wait for no man. We must now turn our faces London-ward, first of all stopping a few minutes in one of the oldest, and certainly one of the most picturesque, of London comet to a well-known name. The notorious John Sadlier, M. P., was buried here. One of the most tasteful monuments here is that erected to Lilly white, the cricketer, by public subscription. One of the largest is that of Westerd erected to Lilly white, the cricketer, by public subscription. One of the largest is that of Wombwell. One of the most original is the family grave of John Atcheler, the well known horse-slaughterer to her Majesty. The number of literary men and artistic actors and actresses baried here is really immense. As we hasten out of the cemetery we pass, on our way to Kentish Town, the public house were her Majesty had a very narrow escape of her life from the horses to her carriage running away, and which fact is
